ACTUARIAL PRACTICE IN HEALTH

Presented by: Health Practice Committee

Wednesday, 16th May 2012

5.00 - 7.00 pm

Actuaries Institute - Level 7, 4 Martin Place, Sydney

The number of actuaries practicing in the health industry is small but growing. Actuaries have been working in private health insurance for over thirty years, and increasing numbers are now working in other areas of the health system including industry regulation, health statistics and government health financing.

At this Insights session actuaries working in healthcare will discuss the work they do, provide examples of recent projects and talk about what interests them about the area. Attendees working in health, or with an interest in doing so, are warmly invited to meet members working in the area over drinks following this session.

PRESENTERS

Kirsten Armstrong

Kirsten is a Director of Three Rivers Consulting, a boutique actuarial and economics firm that provides advice to government agencies and NGOs on health policy, strategy and financing. She has longstanding experience of micro-insurance and accident compensation projects in developing countries, and has recently returned from Mongolia where she advised on the introduction of Mandatory Drivers' Insurance.

Bronwyn Hardy

Bronwyn's current role is at Teachers Federation Health, a Sydney-based private health insurer. She has worked as both an internally employed actuary and an external consultant, in a number of roles from Appointed Actuary to managing a finance team and advising on insurance mergers and acquisitions.

Nicole Stransky

Nicole has 8 years' experience in health insurance and financing, and is currently an Associate Director at Deloitte Actuaries & Consultants. She has consulted on actuarial and financial management issues in the health sectors of Australia, Singapore and New Zealand ranging from pricing and product design to liability valuation and advising on potential health insurance acquisitions.
